Something Worth Sharing

I got a text from my dad the other day. He said that he was in the ER, and they found a mass on his pancreas. I called him right away, and we talked through everything. We do not know what it is yet, but a mass on the pancreas is never a good thing. What I want to share is one phrase my dad mentioned in our call. He said, "I am not really worried about physical things right now."

That phrase made my eyes well up with tears of joy because it speaks of the power of the gospel to change the hearts of men. The gospel can make men see the unseen and walk a narrow road. And even if the shadow of death is cast upon us, we fear not because He is by our side. That phrase is evidence of the resurrection of Jesus Christ. Blessed be our Father who is mighty and merciful to save!

Christians in Boston

Since Emily and I have been in Boston we have worshipped at one place. This Nonprofit Center gave us friendly terms when their tenants were not using the conference space due to Covid. Now the Center sees our group as a Sunday hog because we use the conference center every Sunday. Needless to say, we are no longer a good fit, and we must find a new place to meet. May God's providence be upon us.

Kyle has reworked his schedule to study with our Spanish speaking brethren on Thursday nights. This is a need we have been talking about for a while. We think it is vitally important that if the English adults are meeting twice a week for Bible study, then the Spanish brethren should too. I am very encouraged by Kyle's decision to put the kingdom first. I have no doubt it will be a fruitful use of his time.

The Lord's Work

The study with Robert is going very well. His wife, Kelly, is able to sit in and help if there is anything lost in translation. Robert reads for each study and is engaged. It is such a privilege to watch hearts come into contact with the Word of God. Robert is talking to other family members that need the Word too. God is good.

My study with David and Jasmin continues. We are enjoying the Book of Matthew. He set it up for the reader to make a choice if they will accept and submit to the Lord or deny and reject Him. We are in the middle of this part of his gospel. I pray they will accept Him and become doers of His Word.

Brandon and Emma are going through Matthew as well. We are in the middle of the sermon on the mount. May God be with them.

I try my best to start my work day with a Bible study with the kids. It is amazing to see them pick up on spiritual truths at their age. They truly believe in the Lord. How beautiful is the heart of a child? Emily teaches Bible as part of their homeschool curriculum too. I am thankful to God that we are able to spend time with them in the Word. My prayer is that they will grow up to put the kingdom first.

Our Life

We are waiting for Spring. These last weeks have been cold, windy, and rainy. The warm sunshine and the smells of Spring are more than welcome in these parts.

We went to the equipping conference put on by the church in Brooklyn, NY. It is always encouraging to see the Lord's people gather to worship and praise our Father. We got to learn from elders, teachers, and preachers of God's kingdom.

The little girl can open doors. Jon loves the Florida Gators and hates the Florida States. Howard makes comments in some of our Friday night studies. And Lonnie is quickly becoming a young lady. Time is flying by and we cannot stop it. Some wise folks once told us that when the kids come, you will not remember the time before them. They were right.
